Dear Sirs,

I wish to strongly object to the development of the land known as Brooklands Farm.

There are already large developments in this area which do not pay attention to the current problems of lack of professional people such as doctors nurses, dentists who do not have local hospital facilities to house them.

The new developments are seemingly permitted to allow vast quantities of sewage to be poured into already overworked sewage systems. Which then allows the water companies to discharge it into our local seas.

These developments also ruin the wildlife habitats in these areas when the world generally is being reduced of its wildlife areas.

The amount of traffic will also cause problems for all with pollution rat-runs and traffic jams, especially around our historic city.

With all the recent developments on farmland, where will the land be left to grow food for all the new residents?
