Hi.

I'm sure we do need more housing but if more houses are built surely at the same time we should be providing more schools, doctors surgery, policing and all the other infrastructure that extra people will bring to the area, also the developers should be forced to fit full solar panels systems onto the properties, not just the odd 2 or 3 like at whitstable heights, also provide a nature corridor which will improve nature and people's lives, I think if these were put into place at the planning stage more people may be happy, also the cost of implementing this is not great as none of the houses these days are cheap and everyone would reap the benefits in the long term.

Regards Derek
