

8/5/24

Dear Sir/Madam,

I object to the new development planned for our area (ie Brooklands Farm and the surrounding area). The increase in number of new houses, 1400, on the farm site and another 400 under construction at Grassmere site along with many other areas springing up like mushrooms over this part of Kent, is just urban sprawl on a huge scale.

How is our area going to cope with thousands of new people and everything else that goes with such a huge increase of population, prime farming land being built on, increase in sewage and drainage, the overstretched system cannot cope at the moment, let alone with any new developments, then new roads, schools, hospitals will also have to be built.

But quite possible for all we know, these plans have already been cut and dried and local objections like many in the past will make no difference, all a waste of time, when there is big money to be made for builders and developers.

We shall see!

Yours Sincerely
