Good evening.

I am emailing to object to the above policy. We cannot currently see a doctor now. The roads are terrible, and you cannot get a hospital appointment. In addition to this, more houses will mean more sewage in the sea. It will also mean more cars, more traffic, and more pollution. People will also be unable to see their dentist. There will also be more flooding, with more hosepipe bans, due to increased demand on water supply.

Whitstabe will also lose its beautiful countryside, which it is vital, both for the environment, and people's well being, to preserve. It will also be catastrophic if we lost our precious, and much valued wildlife, and farmland.

In conclusion, I strongly urge you not to proceed with this policy.
