Dear Sir,

I am writing to object in the strongest possible terms to the proposed building of 2,000 new homes in the Brooklands area of the Blean. I am infuriated at the possibility of this huge development, which will put a massive strain on facilities and resources, not to mention the impact on wildlife and agricultural land. I live in Whitstable, and used to drive through this tranquil part of the county on the way to my job as a teacher at Kent College. In my and many others' view, it would be a criminal act to build on this ancient, unique landscape, and I trust that the Council will see sense and halt this project before it starts.

Yours faithfully,
(Mrs) Sally Collins
