To whom it may concern,

As a Canterbury resident I am appalled and disgusted at the prospect of having ANPR camera's placed around Canterbury which will fundamentally disallow and forbid residents from moving around their home city as they wish!

How can the council possibly justify carving up the city which I have grown up in since I was a baby into five different zones and then dictate to me, as a resident, where I can and cannot drive to!

This is an outrageous and horrendous plan to create an even wider personal surveillance network with the intention of tracking and then subsequently punishing people who 'dare' to move where they wish. All this in the name of 'saving the planet' due to the reduction of pollution. This is surely more an attack on our personal freedoms and a further development of being told where we are 'allowed' to travel to!

Have you even considered if parents wish to take their children to school / clubs, or meet their friends to be taken to see Dr's? Or if people finish work late and then need to be picked up by a spouse or loved one? Evidently not! It would appear far more appealing to the people in power to have these people move to a designated part of the city where they will then be given the gracious privilege of being picked up!

Furthermore, this is a complete violation of the Human Rights Act of 1998 which guarantees people of the UK the right to have their privacy protected. I am sure, that you can agree that the council wouldn't want to go against, what is universally recognised, as a law of England!

In conclusion, if this is the Conservative party's belief that we must go on this way, marching headstrong into a dystopian Orweillian future. Then let me assure you that myself and none of my friends will not be voting Conservative in the future!

This policy WILL cost you the support of the people and their vote!

Matt Welch.
