To whom it may concern

As a local person living in Whitstable all my life and my family going back many generations, I feel entitled to have my say, I am saddened by all the building going on now, all fields of green vanishing, is it really necessary to build up this seaside town, at Brooklands Farm now? You can't move on the roads or get a doctor, or school, are we not entitled to go out and look at a green field any more. This little town doesn't need more farm land built on and isn't it green belt land? How does farmland get designated as building land anyway? Who decides a farmers field should have houses on it, greed by farmers and developers. Life is already stressful and difficult. We won't even be able to go and look at anything, but dirt, noise and digging, for years to come, if this plan is allowed to go ahead.

Yours sincerely,
