I will leave all the relative reasons such as infrastructure etc for others.

I am not an intellectual or specialist in any subject and do not expect my objection to be taken seriously.

I am 81 years of age and have managed to get through life by just using common sense I've seen many changes in my lifetime brought about by various governments. Because these changes are gradual, we get used to accepting these good or bad decisions.

Because governments are only guaranteed a 5 year term they will always make short term decisions in order to please the electorate. The immediate decision concerning the housing problem is to persuade local authorities to build more housing.

My heart bleeds for future generations, as bricks and concrete slowly expands into our countryside. REMEMBER, once green pastures have been built upon, it becomes PERMANENT.

I realise that the root of the problem is because we are overpopulated. It's the longest spell we have experienced without a war or serious life threatening epidemic which in previous times controlled the population.

I'm afraid I don't have all the answers, but for the sake of future generations, please save our countryside.

Kind regards

Michael Golding
